Princess Wendycosta rubbed the sleep from her eyes as she awoke from a restful slumber. She took in the view from the window of her abundant castle in Queenendom of Leon and gazed upon the tranquility of the landscape. It was a beautiful day with a cool pleasant breeze.

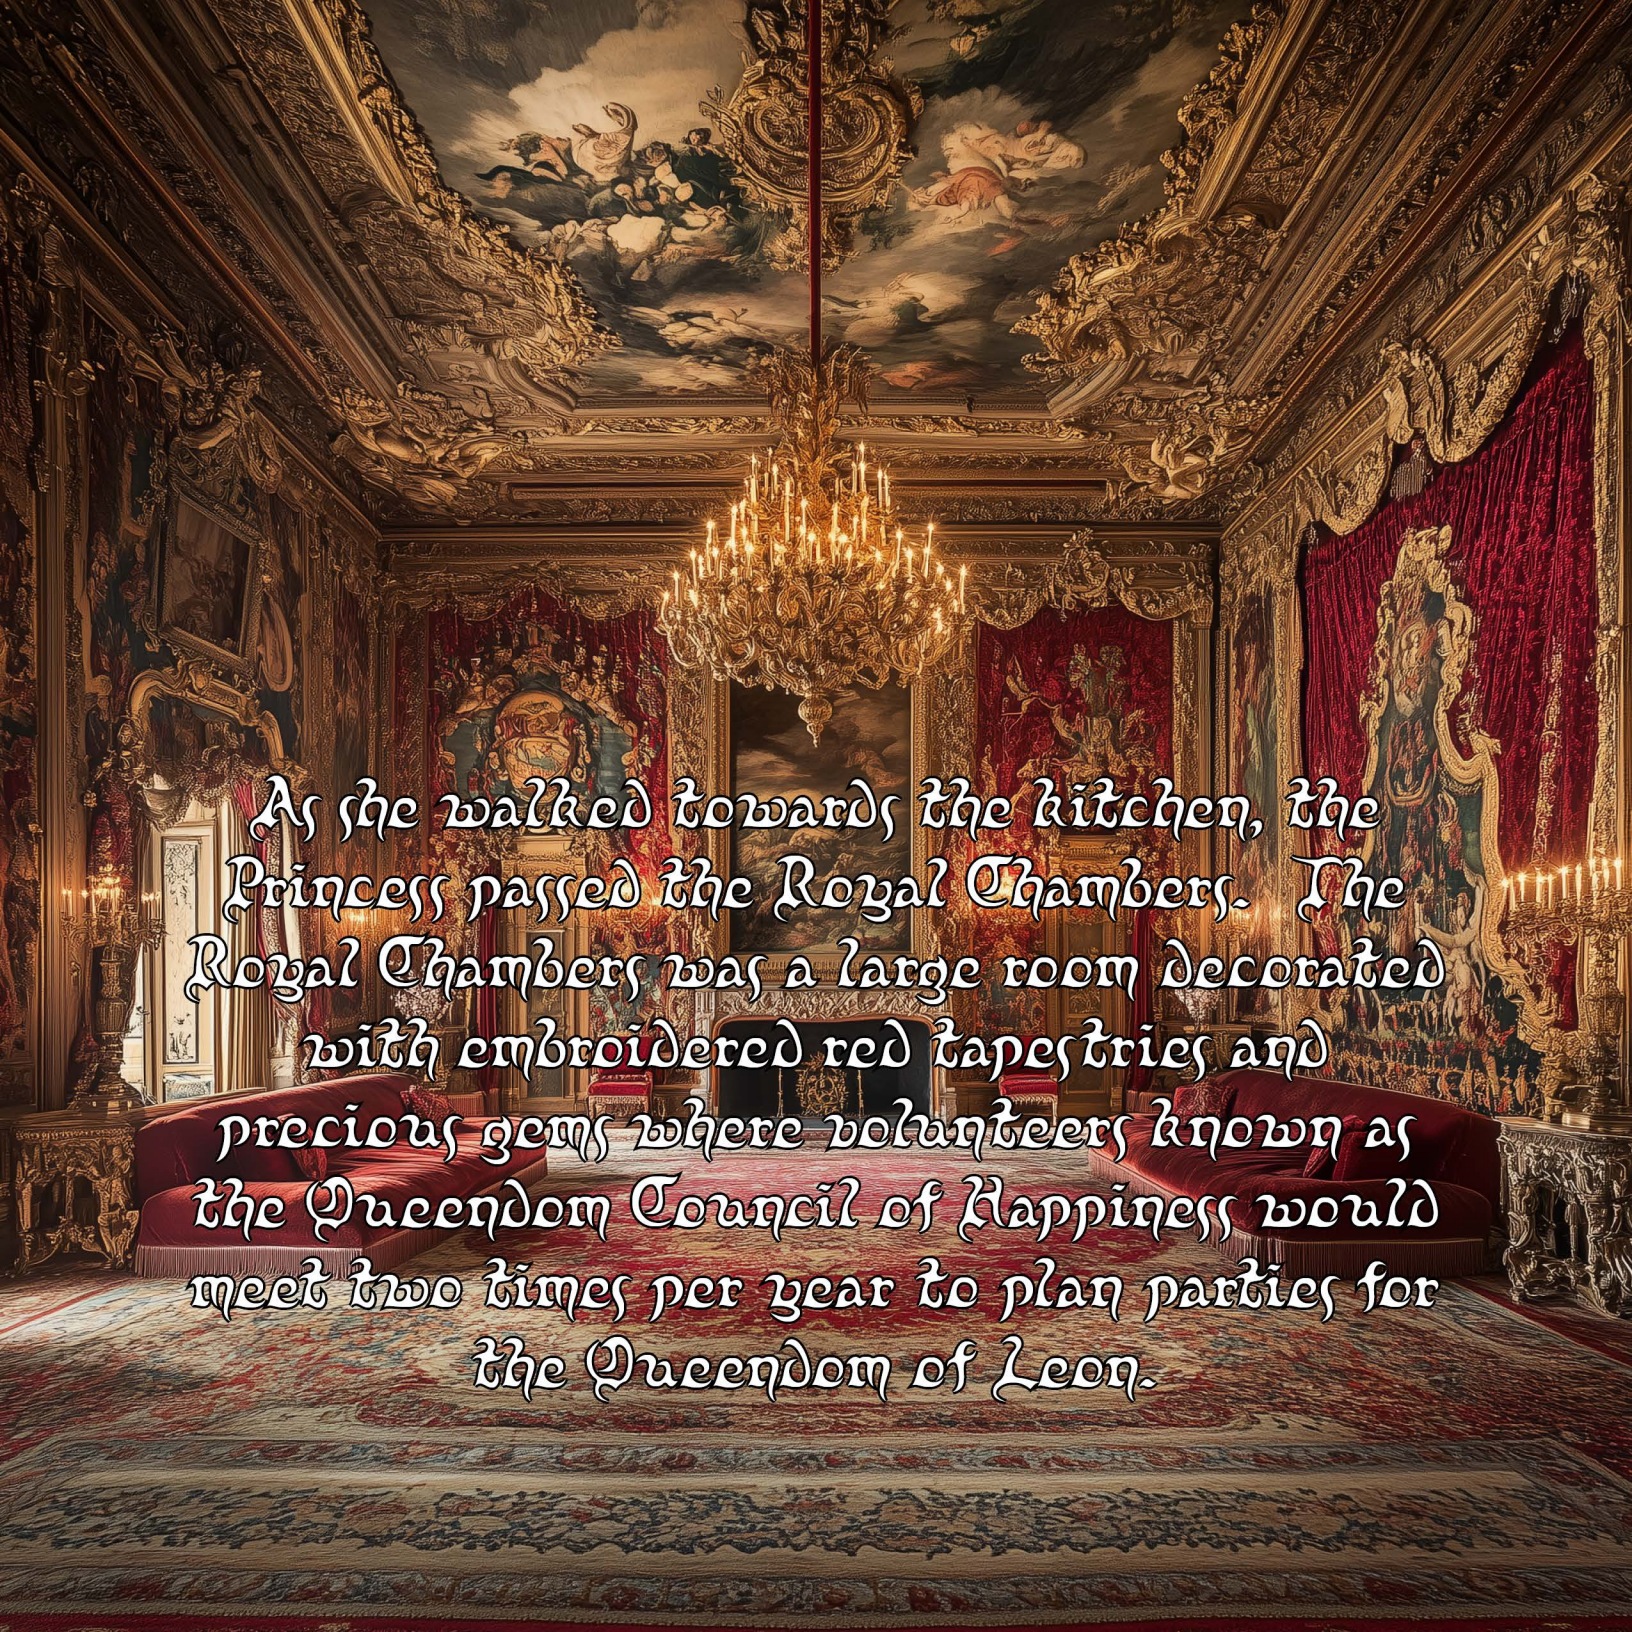

Violet rings surrounded the bright orange sun, making the sky glow a stunning pink. The ripe green leafy trees were adorned with a light blue glow, and all of the townsfolk were happy and smiling.

*The enchanting song of the fairies from the nearby cosmic forest could be faintly heard,
and this put her in a good mood.*

She did her morning royal chores, brushed her long curly blonde hair, changed into a white summer dress adorned with embroidered flowers and headed down the intricately carved stone stairs towards the kitchen to inform the Royal Chef what she wanted for breakfast.

The image shows a highly detailed and opulent interior space, likely a royal chamber. The ceiling is covered in intricate gold leaf carvings and a large, dramatic fresco depicting figures in a cloudy sky. A massive, multi-tiered chandelier hangs from the center, casting a warm glow. The walls are adorned with large, framed tapestries or paintings, and the floor is covered with a large, patterned rug. In the foreground, there are two large, plush red velvet sofas facing each other. The overall atmosphere is one of luxury and historical grandeur.

As she walked towards the kitchen, the Princess passed the Royal Chambers. The Royal Chambers was a large room decorated with embroidered red tapestries and precious gems where volunteers known as the Queenom Council of Happiness would meet two times per year to plan parties for the Queenom of Leon.

The Princess walked into the enormous kitchen in the castle. The walls were adorned with gold and diamond trim, with pots and pans made of pure gold hang on the walls. The Princess greeted the Royal Chef as he was taking a hot bubbly apple pie out of the oven.

A detailed illustration of a lion chef, Chef Basil, wearing a white chef's hat and apron, serving a golden-brown pie on a silver platter to a blonde woman, Princess Wendycosta, who is wearing a white lace dress. They are in a kitchen with a large window showing a landscape, a stove with a fire, and various kitchen items like a teapot and plates.

"Good morning, Princess Wendycosta," said the Royal Chef.

*She replied with a smile,
"Good morning, Chef Basil!
I hope you are having a wonderful day!"*

Basil smiled. "Every day is a wonderful day, my dear. But today is extra wonderful, because we are having a Royal Party, and I am in charge of figuring out the menu and cooking the food for all of the guests!"

Princess Wendycosta looked at Basil with excitement. "Oh my! What is the occasion for this Royal Party?" She asked.

Basil grinned and said, "Well, my dear, it is a party to celebrate your birthday!"

Princess Wendycosta was confused. "A Royal Party, just for my birthday? Are you sure? I am not so certain that I am worth such a grand event."

Basil giggled and said, "My dear, of course you are worth it!"

Princess Wendycosta was confused.
Even though she was loved and admired by many in the Queenendom, she oftentimes felt lonely and didn't always love herself. She didn't feel like people liked her very much, even though this was the furthest thing from the truth.

On the right, a lion with a greenish-brown mane and face, wearing a white chef's hat and a white double-breasted chef's jacket with a small lion emblem on the left chest, looks down at a small object in his hands. On the left, a young woman with long, wavy blonde hair and a golden crown with two small lion heads looks up at him. She is wearing a light blue, sleeveless gown with intricate silver patterns. They are standing in a grand, sunlit courtyard with classical architecture, including columns and a hanging lantern. In the background, a large fountain and more palace buildings are visible under a bright sky.

"That seems like a lot of trouble just for silly little me," she said.

"My dear Princess, it is no trouble. The only trouble here is you not believing you are worth such a grand event," said Basil.

Princess Wendycosta had some mashed banana on toast and some sausage links from the sausage tree for breakfast, eating up every last bite. After she was finished, she rinsed her plate, thanked Basil for his kind words and bid him farewell before running outside to walk to the cosmic forest to talk to the Fairy Queen about the Royal Party. Princess Wendycosta was very close to the Fairy Queen because she always made her feel like she was special and belonged.

A magical forest scene at dusk. A fairy queen with long blonde hair, wearing a dark, ornate dress and a crown adorned with flowers and a butterfly, stands in the center. She holds a small, glowing lantern in her hands. Behind her, large, translucent purple and pink wings are visible, also glowing with light. The forest is filled with tall, dark trees and a misty atmosphere. In the background, a body of water reflects the soft light of the setting or rising sun. Numerous small, glowing fairies with similar wings are scattered throughout the scene, some flying and others perched on branches. The overall mood is enchanting and serene.

Princess Wendycosta approached the cosmic forest of the fairies in her Queenendom. As she walked closer to the cosmic forest, the beautiful song of the fairies became louder and she could see the glow of all of the happy fairies as they moved from tree to tree. The Fairy Queen flew to the Princess and exclaimed, "Hello, dear sweetie!"

The fairy queen, with long white hair and a crown of leaves and flowers, stands facing the princess. The forest is filled with glowing fireflies and a soft, ethereal light. The text is overlaid on the scene, with the first paragraph in the upper left and the second paragraph in the lower left.

The Princess responded, "Hello, dear Fairy Queen,
I hope you are well today!"

"I am very well, thank you," replied the Fairy Queen. "The fairies of the cosmic forest are very busy preparing for your Royal Party, including making the most beautiful dress for you and delivering invitations to the guests!"

The Princess replied, "Fairy Queen, I am not certain if I really deserve such a big event."

"Of course you do, Sweetie," replied the Fairy Queen. "You need to love yourself, dear Princess."

A woman with long, flowing blonde hair and fox-like ears stands in a field of purple lavender and white daisies. She is wearing a white, long-sleeved, ruffled dress with a lace-like pattern. She is looking back over her shoulder towards the viewer. In the background, a large, ancient stone castle with multiple towers and battlements sits atop a hill under a soft, golden sky. The overall scene is magical and ethereal.

She bid farewell to the Fairy Queen, and started to walk back home through fields of plentiful daisies and lavender, a wonderful fragrant smell was in the air.

She began to think that maybe she was worthy of a Royal Party, and started to wonder who would show up for the event when suddenly a green dragon with huge teeth appeared before her very eyes. She thought she was dreaming when the dragon began to speak.

"So you think you deserve a big Royal Party, do you Princess?" sneered the dragon.

"I - I don't know," replied the Princess.

"Well, you don't deserve a party! Princesses are stupid! But I deserve a party because I am a mighty and powerful dragon, so I am going to steal your royal party and make it mine!" shouted the dragon.

Princess Wendycosta was scared, so she ran far away from the dragon. Once she could no longer see him, she sat in the field and started to cry. She was so sad that she could feel pain in her chest where her heart was, as though her heart was breaking. She believed what the dragon said, that she did not deserve a Royal Party. She decided that maybe she was stupid and she would just let the dragon steal her Royal Party. She sat in the field for another hour crying before she got the courage to wipe her tears and start walking home again.

Princess Wendy Costa took a moment to thank the Goddess Sekhmet for all of her blessings and ask for her protection against all evil forces.

She wears a purple, ornate dress and a crown adorned with flowers and butterflies. They are standing in a field of white daisies and purple flowers, with a misty forest and a body of water in the background.

As she approached the castle, Sandy the Fairy Queen appeared holding the most beautiful pink dress worthy of a Royal Party.

"Princess Wendycosta, the fairies have finally finished your dress for the Royal Party!"
Exclaimed the Fairy Queen.

"Fairy Queen, I do not deserve a Royal Party.
A dragon told me so when I was walking home, and he said Princesses are stupid and he was going to steal the party," replied the Princess.

"Oh Sweetie, you most certainly do deserve a Royal Party. That mean dragon knows nothing about who you are and why you deserve a Royal Party. You have touched so many hearts in the Queenendom with your warmth, with your concern for others, my dear. Why don't you help me with the guest list so the fairies can deliver the invitations," said the Fairy Queen.

The Fairy Queen went back to the castle with the Princess and helped her with the guest list.

She is looking over her shoulder towards the viewer. In the background, there is a large, ornate castle with many towers and spires, set against a sunset sky. The scene is framed by dark, leafy trees on the left and right sides.

Then came the day of the Royal Party. Since it was her birthday, Princess Wendycosta excused herself from chores for the day. She cleaned herself up and put on her pretty pink dress that the fairies made and headed downstairs.

As she entered the banquet hall, her friends yelled, "Happy Birthday!"

She could not believe her eyes.

She looked around to see all who were in attendance.

She noticed Whiskers the Catkin Magician was enjoying some royal punch, using his magic wand to sweeten the drink.

Princess Briarpatch from the Queenendom of the Sun was wearing a blue dress adorned with diamonds as she reached out her arms to hug Princess Wendycosta.

King Lionmane, a kind soul from Star Valley Kingdom, was wearing a cape with embroidered stars made of gold, filling his plate with juicy steak from the everlasting steak bush.

Sasgoatigan, a gardener from Rainbow City, had a fresh power biscuit in one hand as he brushed away some biscuit crumbs from his beard with the other.

He has large, translucent wings with orange and red veining. He is holding a small, round cake with white frosting and a single candle. The background is a grand, ornate cathedral with tall spires and arches, bathed in warm, golden light.

Mr. Dragonfly, a respected leader from the nearby Queenendom of Wingsville was also at the party, enjoying a slice of raspberry cream cake.

Rodus the knight from Space Forest was there too, sipping on some punch with El the Space Bard.

Sandy, the Fairy Queen from the Cosmic Forest, led the rest of the fairies in an enchanting dance as they giggled with glee.

Chef Basil was hard at work making sure there was plenty of food to go around.

An illustration of three anthropomorphic lions in elaborate royal clothing. The lion on the left wears a golden crown and a brown robe. The lion in the center wears a crown adorned with colorful flowers and a blue robe, holding a red apple. The lion on the right wears a large purple hat with flowers and a purple robe, also holding a red apple. They are standing in front of a stone castle with arches. A vine with red apples hangs from the top left.

The members of the Queendom Council of Happiness and their friends ate and drank as they enjoyed the Royal Party they helped plan. The townsfolk from Queendom of Leon were all wearing their best attire for the party, as they took turns bobbing for enchanted apples. All of her friends from all of the Queendoms she had touched were there, and everyone was having a wonderful time at the Royal Party, which made the Princess so happy!

Suddenly, the Princess saw a magic cloud appear in the distance and Mr. Dragonfly transformed into the dragon, glaring at the magic cloud.

"This is my party now!" snarled the dragon, showing his large teeth. He put a spell on all of the Royal Party guests so they could not speak or move and started to devour all of the food.

A detailed oil painting depicting a scene from a story. On the left, a young woman with long, flowing blonde hair and small, pink, furry ears is shown from the chest up. She is wearing a pink, puffed-sleeved dress with a gold belt featuring a large, ornate buckle. Her mouth is wide open in a shout or cry, and her eyes are squeezed shut. To her right, a large, green dragon with yellow eyes and sharp white teeth is shown from the chest up. The dragon's mouth is also open, revealing a red tongue. The background is dark and indistinct, with some light-colored stone or wall visible on the far left.

Princess Wendy Costa started to cry, but then she thought about what the Fairy Queen had said and wiped the tears from her eyes.

"No, dragon! Bad dragon!" Exclaimed the Princess.
"This is my party, and I AM worth it, and I am NOT stupid!! Now get away from that food, dragon, it is not yours! It is for the people who love me for who I am and have gathered today to celebrate my birthday at the Royal Party!"

And just like magic the dragon transformed back into Mr. Dragonfly, becoming kind of heart and the spell was instantly broken.

The guests did not realize what had happened, and went back to enjoying the Royal Party like the dragon had never even been there. The Princess was so happy that everyone was having a good time. She was happy that she saved the Royal Party with nothing more than the power of self confidence and self love. She felt her heart tingle in a good way knowing she was worth such a wonderful event as the Royal Party and had the best friends in the entire world.

A romantic illustration of King Lionmane and Princess Wendycosta in a grand ballroom. King Lionmane, a lion with a large mane, is wearing a green tunic and a blue cape. Princess Wendycosta has long, flowing blonde hair adorned with a pink rose and is wearing a pink and purple gown. They are facing each other, about to kiss. The background is a dimly lit ballroom with other guests and chandeliers.

As the party was wrapping up, King Lionmane asked Princess Wendycosta if she would dance with him, and at some point, their eyes met as the energy of love and happiness flowed through them. As they kissed, the guests cheered. They knew, someday, he would try to make her the queen of his heart and make her a priority because she made herself a priority and faced her fears.

And everyone in Queenendom of Leon and all who attended the Royal Party lived happily ever after, especially Princess Wendycosta.
